General Statement of Distinction:

1. Comparing the three inventions set forth in the Office Action Summary mailed on April 4, 2002, the Watkins, Allman and Maadux inventions may appear to be based on the same general concept. However every invention is missing one or more specification that is satisfied in the Mosis invention. More importantly, the Mosis invention offers at least 2 features and claims not satisfied by any of the other three inventions. (See Summary of Distinguishable Features attached hereto as Attachment A).
2. The Mosis invention combines the features of the three inventions, in addition to adding additional features/claims, all together, in one design, to meet the needs of different professional businesses as well as every day customers.
